FROM THE EDITOR

This issue concludes four years as editor for me. It will be my last. Though I feel I have continued to put out a quality product (five original articles were published in the last year), I have become discouraged by the lack of support received from most of the membership and find putting out each issue to be more of a burden. For various reasons the COIN DIGEST is chronically late. "I believe it is time for someone else with more time and enthusiasm to take over." With these words I tendered my resignation to the Ill. N. A. Board of Directors September 10, 1977, and it was accepted by them though my successor has not yet been chosen. Mail sent to me will be forwarded to the proper person.

I have another reason for resigning besides discouragement — I will have left Illinois by the time you read this. I have accepted a position with A.T. & T. in Basking Ridge, New Jersey, and will move there for two to three years before returning to the Chicago area. Because my work will take me back to Illinois frequently, I will attempt to continue to attend board meetings in my capacity as Vice President of Ill. N. A. If I find I am unable to do this, I shall resign as Vice President also.

The coin market has changed considerably since I began editing the COIN DIGEST. Emphasis on investment has never been stronger, and on collecting of sets (except silver dollars) weaker, at any time that I can remember since I started collecting. It is true that the investment emphasis has shifted from rolls and bags to rare and choice coins, but it seems that in these areas the collector has been left behind and most — or even all — of the buying is being done by investors and speculators. For example, the 1913 Liberty Head nickel has not been owned by a collector since the price exceeded $8,000 many years ago (check the pedigrees on all the recent sales). The same is very nearly true as far as the 1804 dollar, 1885 trade dollar, and other highly publicized rarities are concerned. Dr. Wilkison's collection of gold patterns has changed hands twice at $700,000 and up without anyone attempting to sell even one coin to a collector. On the other hand, collectors seem to be dwindling, deserting numismatics for the purer joys of collecting beer cans, autographs, stamps, antiques, etc. Coin World circulation has dropped from nearly 150,000 to barely 100,000 in these four years, and may be below 100,000 by the time you read this. Numismatic News has shrunk to less than half its former size, and no doubt has lost a great deal of circulation as well. This situation, it seems to me, bodes ill for the investors, and could lead to a crash of the rare coin market similar to the roll market collapse of 12-13 years ago.

Where does this leave the true collector (Ill. N. A. must have a few)? His best policy is to buy without the thought of huge gains, to diversify, and to avoid overcommitment (buying on layaway, etc.). If he does this he can enjoy his hobby without worry, come what may.

Bob Leonard,

Coin Investing (?) Speculation

by Larry R. Camp (LM 72)

In most collectors, myself included, there is a little of the speculator. I don't want to get into the "good — bad" argument over speculation in coins — if you are offended by the word "speculation," let's still part friends; just stop reading the article now — OK?!

Well, most of us cannot speculate in BU type coins — or even common gold $20's for that matter. But there is an area — low in price — that is of current interest and has shown marked volatility. Volatility is, after all, a MUST factor for the speculator. Many late date coin issues have, in less than a year, either more than doubled, or fallen to half price. This is a key to finding a good "speculative" coin. Of course, true scarcity is also most important — but artificial scarcity works if the "fever" is high. Remember the 1950-D nickel and how hard it was to find a BU specimen for $25.00, even with no "steps?"

For my first choice I am listing the 1969 government issue mint set. Selling for $2.50 from the government, this long-overlooked set is readily available (although not in quantity) in the $2.00 to $2.25 range, and can often be bought for $18.00 per 10.

While 1969 date coins have enjoyed some popularity, this set has been ignored nearly totally. Let us look at the coins:

1969-D cent: Recognized as "the key" non-variety coin of all the Lincoln Memorial cents.

1969-P dime: On the NNN Teletype circuit a few years ago one dealer bid $15.00 a roll for over three weeks, receiving no offers to sell.

1969-D quarter: Long recognized as the "key" clad quarter.

Remember, the 1949-P dime wasn't much until 1962-1963, and the 1969-P dime might not move until 1982-1983; but it has much potential and I don't feel that $75.00 per roll is a figure that would be out of line for what the coin will be selling for at that time. Despite what many currently say, clad coins are collectible. I have the following projections:

Quantity overhanging the market: 30,000 - 70,000 sets

Sets that would trade over national Teletype in a month if the price were to move to $2.50: under 50,000

Price to bring 250,000 sets into the market: $3.50

If this is correct, or if you want to "speculate," try to find some 1969 GI mint sets and hold them. I recommend buying no higher than $2.25, and holding until a noticeable move has been made.

NOTE: This will be a regular column if accepted by the members, and future issues may recommend selling of coins that were purchased in previous issues. I and associates of mine have positions in the 1969 GI mint set and no guarantee of price increases can be given. — Larry.

Thousands Attend Biggest Ill. N. A. Convention

Over 120 dealers and thousands of registrants attended the 17th Annual Ill. N. A. State Convention in Arlington Heights, Ill., September 9, 10, and 11, 1977, making it the biggest in Ill. N. A. history. The show was sponsored by the Northwest Suburban Coin Club of Arlington Heights and held at the beautiful Arlington Park Hilton Hotel.

Many fine exhibits were placed in competition, and in addition, Maurice M. Burgett, donor of the Maurice M. Burgett Award for Obsolete Currency — Ill. N. A., brought two award-winning non-competitive displays including the exhibit which won first in Obsolete Paper Money at the 1977 A.N.A. Convention. Award winners were:

Burgett Award: Erwin Brauer

Maurice M. Burgett stands behind one of his non-competitive displays.

A.N.A. President Grover C. Criswell, banquet speaker, poses with Co-Chairman Walter Schulz.

Two educational forums were held. The first, on Saturday, featured numismatic authors Dr. John S. Davenport and William Pettit. The second, on Sunday, was conducted by our own LeRoy J. Kaczor Jack Huggins, and Maurice Burgett. All sessions were well-attended. The banquet Saturday night had Grover C. Criswell, new President of the A.N.A., as the main speaker.

In addition to the general membership meeting, two Ill. N. A. board meetings were held at the show. Election results were announced (see page 1) and it was voted to award a club life membership in Ill. N. A. (or $40 for a club that is already Life Member) for the best club promotion of National Coin Week next April.

Plans are not yet final for next year's show.
